

Accommodations – What Suits You Best?

The housing market today offers many types of accommodations. Finding the one that best suits your needs can be a challenge. Listed below are the most common types available:

Single family detached house

- a free standing dwelling of one or more storeys designed to accommodate one family

Semi-detached house

- one of two single-family houses joined and separated by a common wall

Duplex

- two dwelling units, one above the other, with the owner generally choosing to live in one unit and rent the other as a source of investment income

Row or Town house

- one of several single-family dwellings joined together by common walls

High rise apartments

- one of several dwellings contained in a single structure

Condominiums

-